The Paratroopers of the 183rd Nembo in Kosovo: Patrols in Dragash/Dragaš

Published on 19/06/2025

The Italian paratroopers of the 183rd Nembo currently operating under the Regional Command West (RC-W) of the KFOR mission have recently conducted patrol operations in the municipality of Dragash/Dragaš, located in southern Kosovo. These activities are part of KFOR's ongoing efforts to maintain a safe and secure environment for the diverse ethnic communities of Kosovo, reflecting the commitment of international forces to ensure freedom of movement and security throughout the region.

The Role of KFOR in Kosovo

KFOR (Kosovo Force) continues to operate in accordance with the mandate set by United Nations Security Council Resolution 1244, dated 1999, which provides for the maintenance of peace and the protection of people in Kosovo. KFOR's fundamental role is to create a safe environment for all ethnicities living in the territory, while ensuring freedom of movement for all Kosovar citizens.

The patrols conducted by the Italian paratroopers in the municipality of Dragash/Dragaš are a concrete example of KFOR's ongoing commitment to maintaining security and stability in the region. Patrol activities are crucial for monitoring the situation on the ground, preventing potential tensions, and facilitating peaceful coexistence among the different ethnic communities inhabiting the area.

Collaboration with Local and International Authorities

KFOR, as an international peacekeeping force, works closely with the Kosovo police forces and the EULEX mission, the European Union's rule of law operation in Kosovo. These synergies help strengthen the effectiveness of security activities, allowing for coordinated and impartial management of operations. Cooperation among the various international entities is essential to ensure the success of the mission and to contribute to the stabilization of Kosovo.

The patrol operations conducted by the Italian soldiers in the Regional Command West (RC-W) of KFOR represent an important part of the ongoing international commitment to ensuring peace and security in Kosovo. Thanks to the cooperation between KFOR, the Kosovo police, and EULEX, the security forces manage to preserve a stable environment for all ethnic communities, promoting peaceful coexistence and unobstructed freedom of movement. KFOR continues its mandate, contributing to maintaining regional stability and promoting the well-being of all Kosovo citizens.
