The Aeronautica Militare has organized the second edition of the International AeroSpace Power Conference titled: Fighting and winning in the sky beyond the next decade. The ASPC-2025 will take place in Rome (Italy), at the “La Nuvola” Congress Center, from May 8 to 9, 2025, bringing together high-level guests from around the world, military, civilians, and over 1500 participants (universities, research centers, representatives from the industrial world/small and medium enterprises, schools, AM personnel, etc.).

The conference will unfold through the speeches of 5 main speakers, interspersed with four discussion panels during which the topics of strategy and policy in the space sector, future challenges related to innovation, training, and technology, and the close correlation between the world of Defense and those of Industry, research, and development will be explored in depth.

This is the program:
