Lieutenant of the Army Pasquale Trabucco, retired officer and President of the Committee for November 4th, has filed a lawsuit against comedian Luciana Littizzetto following statements made in the March 9, 2025 episode of Che Tempo Fa, a show hosted by Fabio Fazio. This was reported by the National Asbestos Observatory on its website.

During the program, Littizzetto read an ironic letter addressed to the President of the European Commission Ursula Von der Leyen, questioning Italy's ability to contribute to a hypothetical European army. In her monologue, the comedian argued that Italians "are not capable of waging war" and cited historical episodes such as Caporetto, the Greek Campaign, and World War II to support her thesis. We responded to Littizzetto first by publishing the words of General Marco Bertolini and Lieutenant Colonel Gianfranco Paglia, then by clarifying the false myth of the inefficiency of the Italian Army.

Lieutenant Trabucco considered the comedian's statements damaging to the dignity of the Armed Forces and explained the reasons for his legal action:

I made this decision because I think certain things should not be touched. I mean the

The National Asbestos Observatory (ONA) also took a stand on the matter, expressing solidarity with the Armed Forces. Lawyer Ezio Bonanni, president of the ONA, stated:

strongly supports the action of our armed forces, which constitute the bastion of freedom. Credit must be given to those who have honored the flag and the homeland without retreat. Our men, including the Alpini, were thus overwhelmed. The First World War allowed for

The lawsuit filed by Lieutenant Trabucco has sparked a heated debate between those who defend satire as a form of free expression and those who believe that certain statements have crossed the line of institutional and historical respect. It remains to be seen what Luciana Littizzetto's reaction will be and if the matter will have further developments.
