The 74th Anniversary Ceremony: A Moment of Reflection and Pride

The day began with the laying of a wreath at the monument to the Fallen of the Army Aviation, by the Commander of AVES, Major General Salvatore Annigliato, and the President of the National Army Aviation Association (ANAE), General Sergio Buono. The Deputy Commander of the Land Operational Forces, Lieutenant General Salvatore Cuoci, participated in the ceremony along with many other prominent figures, paying tribute to those who sacrificed their lives in the service of the Nation.

In his speech, General Cuoci highlighted the daily commitment of the men and women of AVES, emphasizing how each mission, carried out with courage and determination, represents an invaluable operational and human value. "Every day, you face the sky with a spirit of service, professionalism, and dedication, completing missions of great importance", stated General Cuoci.

A History of Passion and Dedication: AVES Over the Years

The Army Aviation has undergone a long evolutionary journey in these 74 years, always based on a single guiding thread: passion for their work. The Commander of AVES proudly recalled the commitment of the Specialty, not only at home but also abroad, as fundamental for the promotion of peace, security, and international cooperation. "The success of the Specialty is thanks to each of you," said the Commander, addressing the members of AVES, "Every flight, every mission, every step we take together is a testament to our spirit of service."

In 74 years of activity, AVES has been able to respond to the challenges of time, demonstrating a constant ability to innovate and adapt. The operations conducted, even in the most complex contexts, have always been supported by the professionalism and dedication of those who wear the blue beret. Today, the Army Aviation is a modern and cutting-edge reality, increasingly oriented towards interoperability with other armed forces and international institutions.

Innovation and Future: The Specialty Keeping Up with the Times

The ceremony concluded with a demonstration of the operational capabilities of the Specialty, including a static display of fixed-wing and remotely piloted aircraft, which aroused the interest of all present. AVES confirms itself as an institution capable of facing future challenges, always keeping a focus on technological innovation and the ability to operate in complex and multiregional scenarios.

The Italian Army Aviation continues to be a fundamental pillar of the Armed Forces, carrying out its mission with the same spirit that characterized the first flight, which took place 74 years ago. Its journey, undertaken since its establishment, has been marked by continuous technological evolution and the willingness to adapt to geopolitical changes and international security needs.
